Scanner Reports 7-27-15

updated: Jul 27, 2015, 7:00 AM

Roger the Scanner Guy

Monday-Monday. Hope y'all had a great weekend. Mine was plain as I am. I don't have much of a life anymore. I listen to music, watch DVDs, and hang out with the cat. He has the same life as I do pretty much. He tries to get away, but I think he likes having a home someone that cares about him, as I do. I saw a conversation several people were having on the internet about meth heads and other street characters over the weekend. These people were totally making fun of the addicts craving their drugs of choice. I guess it might be funny to some people who have never been addicted. Someone who was bought up in a snow globe where everything is perfect. One of my friends was involved in the conversation, cracking on these people like the rest of them. Old Roger got into the conversation I did not know that my friend kept his former addiction a secret. I did not totally break his anonymity, but I offended him. I did not mean to, but now that I figured out he thinks he's "better than" those people I'm glad I did. I have been one of those street characters, and I have known many. Most of them have very sad lives and for some BOZO to make fun of them and laugh reveals some people have no class at all. To think they are "better than" someone else. I don't feel that way, and I hope I never do. I might call people idiots, but I'm not "better than" them, or anyone. I don't feel better than my friend, though I think he feels like he's better than me though he would probably never admit that he thinks he's "better than". He's a Chicago Cubs fan, and they think they are better than everyone else. They stink, but I don't think I'm better than them, much.

I have great memories of my Grandfather and Uncle taking me to games back in the '60's. I remember some of the Cubs players back then; Randy Huntly, catcher, Ernie Banks, Don Kisseringer, Ron Santo, Billy Williams. I remember the green playing field, the orange brick wall, the stands, the odor of popcorn, Red Hots, and Beer. I don't remember as many White Sox players as Cubs. I remember Joe Horton and Carlos May, both pitchers. My Uncle took me to more Sox games, my Grandfather more Cubs games. Those were some of the good old days in my life. I have had a lot of hard times in my life but the Good Old Days make up for the hard times. I never caught a foul ball, or a home run at the games but I always took my glove to the games in hope. I have a Cubs Sweatshirt that one of the 3rd base coaches wore on the field in the 80's. I met Leo Durocher once and talked to him, way way back in the 60's. I can't remember what we talked about it was most likely baseball though.

Trouble spots in town I hear a lot of calls for service at the MTD. Mentioning it, someone left a comment over the weekend asking where are some other trouble spots in town that have problems besides the regular spots. The regular spots being 100 West Carrillo, the Library, behind World Market, the .99 Cent store parking lot, 331 West Montecito, 209 State Street, just to name a few. I haven't heard the Habit lately in the 600 Block of State Street. There used to be a lot of problems on South Milpas, not as much now. Sometimes I hear things over at the shopping center where Trader Joes, Rite Aid, and Pet Co is but not like it used to be. It's pretty mellow; some panhandlers, but not as bad. Feel free to mention trouble spots. I don't go all over town anymore like I used to when I had transportation.

Roger, My grandpa and my aunt took me to baseball games on Ortega Street, near Garden St. I don't know if it would be called a stadium but it was big, wooden, stained green. I liked singing "Take me out to the ball game" and getting peanuts. Aren't old time good memories fun?
